1.MAKE A FLYER

- Make a flyer with a picture of your pet and only your number, do not put your name or address on it and don't give out identifying information except a photo of your animal.
- If someone calls, you can ask them for the identifying info to verify the sighting. If you put a reward don't say an amount.
- Make some high visibility flyers on fluorescent paper and laminate or cover in plastic.
 Post these at key intersections where you will get people coming from a lot of areas near your house.

2. WHERE TO FLYER

- Go to each house within a 5 block radius and give a flyer. Put it on the doorstep (not in mailbox) if the person isn't home. Or put it on the gate etc. Ask the person to search their place or ask if you can search.
- Give a flyer to the delivery service drivers that come into your area. Post flyers in your area at waist level on telephone poles and at eye level in such places as veterinary offices, pet shops, groomers, grocery stores, community bulletin boards, local shelters etc.
- Go in person to the local shelters and give them a flyer. Ask to see their dead on arrival lists.
- Send your flyer by email or fax to local veterinary offices during the day

3. HOW TO SEARCH

- Place strong-scented articles like used socks, litter box, toys etc. outside your home to attract your pet. Animals find their way by scent as well as sound.
- Call your animal when you flyer. They may hear and then come home later.
- Also carry a treat box and shake it. And stop and listen to see if you hear your animal making any noise.
- Bring a flashlight to check in dark spaces, animals will tend to hide in a place that is dark.
- Talk to everyone you meet ask if they saw the animal or anything unusual.
- Call local veterinarian offices during the day. After 5 PM, call veterinarian emergency clinics. Go see in person if any animals were brought in for treatment.
- Put an ad in the local papers, on Craigslist or NextDoor.. Check the found sections every day.
- If your animal is microchipped check frequently with the microchip company. Also give the chip number to the shelter, vets etc

Don't give up! It can take a while to find your animal.
